FIRST SPINACH IS READY FOR MARKET

The spinach crop has been planted more than a month earlier this year and the first spinach of the season is being cut this week. It is said to be of excellent quality. The F. E. Booth cannery Co. of Centerville has under contract about one thousand acres of early spinach which will be ready for the cannery early in February and will mean employment for a large number of people at least thirty days earlier than in previous years.

Some of this first spinach is being cut on the Hotel Belvoir property.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM GREATLY APPRECIATED

What was characterized as the finest Christmas program in years was presented at the Niles Congregational Church last Friday evening. It was built around the tableaux of the visit of shepherds and wise men to the birth place of Jesus. The Young People's Choir, each member of which was robed in a white surplice, gave the Christ child story in song while a concealed reader gave the connecting links. Meanwhile the whole story was being dramatized on the stage by appropriately costumed figures who acted their parts in a series of colored spot lights planned and operated by Mr. Jack Williamson, Edwin Hepler and Mr. J. Green. Not only were there lights, music and costume to bring out the full charm of the story but also a well planned decorative scheme of holly, shrubbery and silhouetting bamboo. Those planning and directing the program were Mrs. Gladys Williamson and Mrs. J. C. Shinn. A good audience was present to enjoy it.

Following the program the church family retired to the parlors where there was a beautifully lighted and trimmed Christmas tree, a table full of gifts for others and oranges, apples and Christmas Calendars for all present. The evening was heartily enjoyed by all.

OTHER WISE MAN ENJOYED

On Christmas morning at the regular church hour Mrs. A. W. Seebart gave a dramatic reading of "The Other Wise Man" by Van Dyke. The reading was very appropriate for such an occasion and was appreciated by the congregation. The service was made still more enjoyable by a special Christmas solo rendered by Mr. Roy F. Morgan of Modesto.

CHURCH SERVICES

The usual services of the church school and church will be conducted next Sunday (New Year's Day), at the Niles Church.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank the many friends for their kindness and sympathy and for the floral offerings at the time of our recent bereavement.

TWO INCHES OF RAIN FALLS DURING PAST WEEK

Moderate temperatures and plenty of rain prevailed at Christmastide here this year. Rain began falling on Saturday and continued through Christmas day. Intermittent showers have been the prevailing order all week. The rain has fallen gently and practically all of it has soaked into the ground in a way to be of great benefit to agriculture. All in all, about two inches of moisture has fallen since December 24th.

According to Miss L. A. Barry's record the rainfall for this year to date is 6.74 inches. Last year 7.39 inches of rain had fallen up to December 29.

The heavy rains of the past few days have caused washouts on the detour between Mission San Jose and Sunol where the new $200,000 bridge is under construction, and all traffic from this road is now being routed through Niles canyon although the bridges there have all been considered unsafe for heavy vehicles.

Work on the Niles Canyon road, where the "narrows" are being widened, has also been postponed because of the high water.

DECOTO

Mrs. Mills and Miss Breiner were the guests of Mrs. C. Blose on Sunday, and of Rev. Henry McCall of Newark on Monday.

Misses Eva, Olga, Marie Swanson and Mr. Oscar Swanson spent the holidays at home with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Swanson.

Last week Mrs. W. A. McPherson visited her sister in Oroville.

Mr. Harley Dennis of Hayward was the week end guest of Mr. Lawrence Pimentel.

On Wednesday evening thirty people were present at the Cast Party at the Community Church. Refreshments of Club House salad, coffee and cake were served. All enjoyed this social affair.

On Monday morning a Swiss dairy truck loaded with milk crashed into the ditch by the W. P. R. R. tracks in order to prevent a crash with the 10.30 train. The driver escaped uninjured. The only injury done to the car was a damaged head light and tires. The car was soon pulled out.

The Boy Scouts distributed baskets of food to the needy families of Decoto on Thursday. Several of the needy families attended the Health Center's Christmas party on Saturday afternoon at Centerville.

At the Community Church the primary class of the Sunday School won the airplane race that lasted three months. Their plane was named "Lindberg." Award pins were given out to the following who have come twelve or more Sundays in succession: Wendell Blose, Glodena Bowers, Elizabeth Bowers, Ruby Bowers, Bernice Nevis, Mary Coleman, Vivian Blose, Mildred Nevis.

The Woolarac tribe of the Friendly Indians has won a membership of ten Swastika pins which were given to them on Saturday by their Big Chief.

Any one who passed by the meeting of the C. E. on Sunday saw a very effective scene. All the lights were turned out and the members were singing carols by the light of two red tapers with a very beautiful wreath in the background. The story of the "The Other Wise Man" was told by Orville Blose. A vivid picture of the birth of Christ, and "The Sacred Flame" were told by Miss Lucile Breiner. Afterwards popcorn and punch were served.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A delightful surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Silva, Jr. of Decoto in honor of their daughter Agnes's eighteenth birthday on December 21. Whist, dancing and games were features of the amusement after which in the wee small hour of the morning refreshments were served to all.

Those present were: The Misses Agness Silva, Edna Mello, Helen Feletti, Evelyn Cloudeane, Bertha Silva, of Decoto, Alice Ferry, Eytel Ferry, Veronica Ferry, of Alviso, Betty Messmer of Oakland; Mr. Manuel Silva, Clarence Frates, Manuel Perry, Richard Silva, of Decoto.

CHILDREN ENJOY PARTY MEN'S CLUB FINANCES

The Christmas party given for needy children of the township which was financed by the money given by the Men's Club, was a great success. Messrs. Gling and Marin of Niles each furnished a truck and Miss Zelmira Dominici, Miss Reid and Mrs. Jones of Niles, Mrs. Ruth McCord and Miss Hutchins of Hayward used their cars, and children from Warm Springs, Alvarado, Decoto, Newark, Centerville, Niles and Mission San Jose to the number of one hundred were taken to the Country Club house at Centerville.

Appropriate gifts ranging from baseballs and bats, large toy trains, dolls, sewing kits and other toys and useful gifts were presented to the children, the Santa Claus from Park's store of Centerville officiating. A lovely Christmas tree, candy, apples and ice cream added to the delight of the children and their enjoyment of the occasion was so great that it must have come as a touching surprise to all who were privileged to help make the occasion a success.

COMMITTEE AT WORK ON DEDICATION PROGRAM

The committee in charge of the dedication program for Niles' new Memorial Library is working hard, and plans are progressing very satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ingram of Gridley with their two children returned home today after spending the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Chittenden of Niles and with Oakland friends.

CENTERVILLE

It has certainly been holiday week. The Mickels are still in San Jose. Mrs. M. Allen and son spent Christmas with Mrs. Morrison and Gentry in Palo Alto. The Mathiesons had a home gathering with tree and imported Santa Claus. Mr. and Mrs. Gregory was with the Blanchard's in San Jose. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Bunting entertained Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Gurnett and family at Mrs. F. O. Buntings.

The George Emersons had relatives, Mrs. Gimmel and Mr. Williams of Oakland, Mrs. Lucas of San Rafael.

Mrs. Mary Jasper is recovering from a case of ptomaine poisoning caused by eating persimmons the latter part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dusterberry had a large gathering including the Moores and family, of Niles, Mr. and Mrs. Jelliff, Sr. of Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. Joliff of Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blacow spent the day in San Francisco with Mrs. W. Steeley.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Blacow were in Oakland. The Gramms entertained a large party of relatives and friends. Rev. and Mrs. Attwood and Cyril entertained friends from Los Angeles. Mrs. Viola Ames and son Clarence went to Fresno to spend their Christmas.

ST. JAMES SUNDAY SCHOOL PARTY

About sixty gathered at Memorial Hall, Tuesday evening, December 27. Busy fingers had placed and decorated the pretty tree. Rev. J. Attwood opened the program with prayer. Then Christmas carols were sung, the children spoke appropriate pieces in their own individual way. At last there was a jingle of bells and one of the neatest looking Santa Claus stepped in and with a mild voice welcomed all, especially the children who were asked if they came to Sunday school. Then a big pack on his back was opened and every one received a present of a box of candy and an orange. Then came chocolate and cake and the children and grown people thought it was the jolliest party of the year.

Mrs. Howard Chadbourne has been quite ill and is still under the doctor's care.

Mr. and Mrs. Agosti and daughter are with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chadbourne.

Mr. M. Peterson of Alameda spent Christmas with the Mathiesons.

John Garcia, the eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Garcia, was badly burned about the hands and knees Monday when a toy steam engine with which he was playing exploded. He had tied down the safety valve to speed up the engine and the pressure became too great.

Last Saturday the Fire department made some preliminary tests of a new fire truck. A series of tests are being made and the truck is to be purchased if it meets with the approval of the department.

Dr. Holman moved into his new modern residence the latter part of last week. The house is attractively finished in stucco and is a pleasing addition to the residence section of town.

IRVINGTON COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE IS GREAT SUCCESS

The Irvington Community Church gave its annual Christmas Entertainment last Thursday evening to an audience of about one hundred and sixty. A gaily decorated and illuminated Christmas tree occupied a prominent place on the platform from which Santa Claus distributed gifts and candy to every child in the audience. A delightful part of the program was a pageant of the Christmas story put on by a group of young people from Decoto. This pageant was strikingly rendered by the use of colored spotlights and magnificent costumes provided for the occasion by the First Presbyterian Church of Oakland. The young people of Irvington dramatized Leo Tolstol's story "Where love is there is God also," which story was rewritten for this purpose by Rev. J. R. Stevenson. Perhaps the most interesting part of the program was the part taken by the younger children, who spoke their pieces with all the happy ingenuousness of childhood. The entertainment was perhaps one of the most successful ever attempted by the Irvington church.

BETTENCOURT GIVEN A GREAT OVATION

Larry Bettencourt, Washington Township's football hero, was honored at a reception at the High School last Thursday evening, when some six hundred people gathered to show him how Washington Township appreciates his athletic record. A program of speeches and music opened the affair and later in the evening the crowd adjourned to the Parish Hall at Centerville for the dance which followed. The home folks presented Larry with a number of gifts as tokens of their regard. A handsome leather traveling bag, completed equipped, a gold pen and pencil and a slicker comprised the gifts and a group of his San Jose friends gave him a set of military brushes the same evening. A surprise event was the presentation of a certificate of selection as All-American Center, signed by "Pop" Warner, Tad Jones and Knute Rockne. Six other members of the St. Mary's Football squad were present, including Al Tobin, Captain elect for next year. Speeches by Brother Z. Leo and Coach Madigan were enthusiastically received by the large crowd. An exceptionally large number stayed for the dancing and the whole affair was considered a gratifying success.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Silveria of Newark on December 26.

H. S. OPENS JANUARY THIRD OTHERS ONE WEEK LATER

Washington Union High School will re-open next Tuesday, January 3, after a two weeks' vacation. The grammar schools at Niles and other towns in the township will open the following Monday, January 9.

The High school vacation was shortened so that school will close early enough in the spring to allow the teachers to attend summer school.

Any one in Alameda County having Capri fig trees should notify W. B. Kirk, Horticultural inspector and State Quarantine Guardian at Niles and he will call and give valuable information in regard to their care.

HOLIDAY SPIRIT AFFECTS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The vacationing spirit prevailed this week in both Niles and Centerville. A very light attendance at the Niles Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday, and no meeting at all of the Centerville club resulted. Holiday visits, invoicing, hunting trips and rainy weather were contributing factors.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Hadad entertained the Fred Naphan family and about ten friends from Oakland at their home Christmas eve. Several of the Oakland friends remained over until Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Bendel and children, attended a Bendel family reunion at the home of Mr. Bendel's mother at Alameda on Christmas eve.

CHAPTER X

The Hidden Room

A few moments later Jack Bailey, seeing a thin glow of candle-light from the attic above, and hearing Lizzie's protesting voice, made his way up there. He found them in the trunk-room, a dusty, dingy apartment lined with high closets along the walls—the floor littered with an incongruous assortment of attic objects—two battered trunks, a clothes hamper, an old sewing machine, a broken-backed kitchen chair, a pair of dilapidated dress-suitcases and a shabby satchel that might once have been a woman's dressing-case—in one corner a grimy fireplace in which, obviously, no fire had been lighted for years.

But he also found Miss Cornelia holding her candle to the floor and staring at something there.

"Candle-grease!" she said, sharply, staring at a line of white spots by the window. She stooped and touched the spots with an exploratory finger.

"Fresh candle-grease! Now who do you suppose did that? It leads straight to the fireplace!" she murmured in tones of Sherlockian gravity. Bailey repressed an involuntary smile. But her next words gave him genuine food for thought.

"It's been going through my mind for the last few minutes that no chimney flue runs up this side of the house!" she said.

Bailey stared. "Then why the fireplace?"

"That's what I'm going to find out!" said the spinster grimly. She started to rap the mantel, testing it for secret springs.

"Jack! Jack!" It was Dale's voice, low and cautious, coming from the landing of the stairs.

Bailey stepped to the door of the trunk room.

"Come in," he called in reply. "And lock the door behind you."

Dale entered, turning the key in the lock behind her.

"Where are the others?"

"They're still searching the house. There's no sign of anybody."

"They haven't found—Mr. Anderson?"

Dale shook her head. "Not yet."

She turned toward her aunt. Miss Cornelia had begun to enjoy herself once more.

Rapping on the mantelpiece, poking and pressing various corners and sections of the mantel itself, she remembered all the detective stories she had ever read and thought, with a sniff of scorn, that she could better them. She rapped on the wall above the mantel—exactly—there was the hollow echo she wanted.

"Hollow as Lizzie's head!" she said triumphantly. The fireplace was obviously not what it seemed—there must be a space behind it unaccounted for in the building plans. Now what was the next step detectives always took. Oh, yes—they looked for panels; panels that moved. And when one shoved them away there was a button or something. She pushed and pressed and finally something did move.

It was the mantelpiece itself, false grate and all, which began to swing out into the room, revealing behind a dark, hollow cubbyhole, some six feet by six—the hidden room at last!

"Oh, Jack, be careful!" breathed Dale, as her lover took Miss Cornelia's candle and moved toward the dark hiding place. But her eyes had already caught the outlines of a tall iron safe in the room, and in spite of her fears, her lips formed a wordless cry of victory.

But Jack Bailey said nothing at all. One glance had shown him that the safe was empty.

The tragic collapse of all their hopes was almost more than they could bear. Coming on top of the nerve-racking events of the night, it left them dazed and directionless. It was, of course, Miss Cornelia who recovered first.

"Even without the money," she said, "the mere presence of this safe here, hidden away, tells the story. The fact that some one else knew and got here first cannot alter that."

But she could not cheer them. It was Lizzie who created a diversion. Lizzie who had bolted into the hall at the first motion of the mantelpiece outwards, and who now with equal precipitation came bolting back. She rushed into the room, slamming the door behind her, and collapsed into a heap of moaning terror at her mistress' feet. At first she was completely inarticulate, but after a time she muttered that she had seen "him" and then fell to moaning again.

The same thought was in all their minds, that in some corner of the upper floor she had come across the body of Anderson. But when Miss Cornelia finally quieted her and asked this, she shook her head.

"It was the Bat I saw," was her astounding statement. "He dropped through the skylight out there and ran along the hall. I saw him, I tell you. He went right by me!"

"Nonsense," said Miss Cornelia, briskly. "How can you say such a thing?"

But Bailey pushed forward and took Lizzie by the shoulder.

"What did he look like?"

"He hadn't any face. He was all black where his face ought to be."

"Do you mean he wore a mask?"

"Maybe. I don't know."

She collapsed again, but when Bailey, followed by Miss Cornelia, made a move toward the door, she broke into frantic wailing.

"Don't go out there!" she shrieked. "He's there, I tell you. I'm not crazy. If you open that door, he'll shoot."

But the door was already open and no shot came. With the departure of Bailey and Miss Cornelia, and the resulting darkness due to their taking the candle, Lizzie and Dale were left alone. The girl was faint with disappointment and strain; she sat huddled on a trunk, saying nothing, and after a moment or so Lizzie roused to her condition.

"Not feeling sick, are you?" she asked.

"I feel a little queer."

"Who wouldn't, in the dark here, with that monster loose somewhere near by?" But she stirred herself and got up. "I'd better get the smelling salts," she said heavily. "God knows I hate to move, but if there's one place safer in this house than another, I've yet to find it."

She went out, leaving Dale alone. The trunk room was dark, save that now and then as the candle appeared and disappeared the doorway was faintly outlined. On this outline she kept her eyes fixed, by way of comfort, and thus passed the next few moments. She felt weak and dizzy and entirely despairing.

Then—the outline was not so clear. She had heard nothing, but there was something in the doorway. It stood there, formless, diabolical, and then she saw what was happening. It was closing the door. Afterward she was mercifully not to remember what came next; the figure was perhaps intent on what was going on outside, or her own movements may have been as silent as its own. That she got into the mantel room and even partially closed it behind her is certain, and that her description of what followed is fairly accurate is borne out by the facts as known.

The Bat was working rapidly. She heard his quick, nervous movements; apparently he had come back for something and secured it, for now he moved again toward the door. But he was too late; they were returning that way. She heard him mutter something and quickly turn the key in the lock. Then he seemed to run toward the window, and for some reason to recoil from it.

The next instant she realized that he was coming toward the mantel room, that he intended to hide in it. There was no doubt in her mind as to his identity. It was the Bat, and in a moment more he would be shut in there with her.

She tried to scream and could not, and the next instant she was in a dead faint on the floor.

Bailey meanwhile had crawled out on the roof and was carefully searching it. But other things were happening also. A disinterested observer could have seen very soon why the Bat had abandoned the window as a means of egress.

Almost before the mantel had swung to behind the arch-criminal, the top of a tall pruning ladder had appeared at the window, and by its quivering showed that some one was climbing up, rung by rung. Unsuspectingly enough he came on, pausing at the top to flash a light into the room, and then cautiously swinging a leg over the sill. It was the doctor. He gave a low whistle, but there was no reply, save that, had he seen it, the mantel swung out an inch or two. Perhaps he was never so near death as at that moment, but that instant of irresolution on his part saved him, for by coming into the room he had taken himself out of range.

Even then he was very close to destruction, for after a brief pause and a second rather puzzled survey of the room, he started toward the mantel itself. Only the rattle of the door-knob stopped him, and a call from outside.

"Dale!" called Bailey's voice from the corridor. "Dale!"

"Dale! Dale! The door's locked!" cried Miss Cornelia.

The doctor hesitated. The call came again.

"Dale! Dale!" and Bailey pounded on the door as if he meant to break it down.

The doctor made up his mind.

"Wait a moment!" he called. He stepped to the door and unlocked it. Bailey hurried himself into the room, followed by Miss Cornelia with her candle. Lizzie stood in the doorway, timidly, ready to leap for safety at a moment's notice.

"Why did you lock that door?" said Bailey, angrily, threatening the doctor.

"But I didn't," said the latter, truthfully enough. Bailey made a movement of irritation. Then a glance about the room informed him of the amazing, the incredible fact. Dale was not there! She had disappeared!

"You—you," he stammered at the doctor. "Where's Miss Ogden? What have you done with her?"

The doctor was equally baffled.

"Done with her?" he said indignantly. "I don't know what you're talking about—I haven't seen her!"

"Then you didn't lock that door?" Bailey menaced him.

The doctor's denial was firm.

"Absolutely not. I was coming through the window when I heard your voice at the door!"

Bailey's eyes leapt to the window—yes—a ladder was there—the doctor might be speaking the truth after all. But if so, how and why had Dale disappeared?

The doctor's admission of his manner of entrance did not make Lizzie any the happier.

"In at the window—just like a bat!" she muttered in shaking tones. She would not have stayed in the doorway if she had not been afraid to move anywhere else.

"I saw lights up here from outside," continued the doctor easily. "And I thought—"

Miss Cornelia interrupted him. She had laid down her candle and revolver on the top of the clothes hamper and now stood gazing at the mantel fireplace.

"The mantel's—closed!" she said.

The doctor stared. So the secret of the hidden room was a secret no longer. He saw ruin gaping before him—a bottomless abyss. "Damnation!" he cursed, impotently, under his breath.

Bailey turned on him savagely.

"Did you shut that mantel?"

"No!"

"I'll see whether you shut it or not!" Bailey leapt toward the fireplace.

"Dale! Dale!" he called desperately, leaning against the mantel. His fingers groped for the knob that worked the mechanism of the hidden entrance.

The doctor picked up the single lighted candle from the hamper, as if to throw more light on Bailey's task. Bailey's fingers found the knob. He turned it. The mantel began to swing out into the room.

As it did so the doctor deliberately snuffed out the light of the candle he held, leaving the room in abrupt and obliterating darkness.

"Doctor, why did you put out that candle?"

Miss Cornelia's voice cut the blackness like a knife.

"I didn't—I—"

"You did—I saw you do it."

The brief exchange of accusation and denial took but an instant of time, as the mantel swung wide open. The next instant there was a rush of feet across the floor, from the fireplace—the shock of a collision between two bodies—the sound of a heavy fall.

"What was that?" queried Bailey, dazedly, with a feeling as if some great winged creature had brushed at him and passed.

Lizzie answered from the doorway.

"Oh, oh!" she groaned, in stricken accents. "Somebody knocked me down and trampled on me!"

"Matches, quick!" commanded Miss Cornelia. "Where's the candle?"

The doctor was still trying to explain his curious action of a moment before.

"Awfully sorry, I assure you—it dropped out of the holder—ah, here it is!"

He held it up triumphantly. Bailey struck a match and lighted it. The wavering little flame showed Lizzie prostrate but vocal, in the doorway—and Dale, lying on the floor of the hidden room, her eyes shut, and her face as drained of color as the face of a marble statue. For one horrible instant Bailey thought she must be dead.

He rushed to her wildly and picked her up in his arms. No—still breathing—thank God! He carried her tenderly to the only chair in the room.

"Doctor!"

The doctor, once more the physician, knelt at her side, and felt for her pulse. And Lizzie, picking herself up from where the collision with some violent body had thrown her, retrieved the smelling salts from the floor. It was onto this picture, the candle light shining on strained faces, the dramatic figure of Dale, now semi-conscious, the desperate rage of Bailey, that a new actor appeared on the scene.

Anderson, the detective, stood in the doorway, holding a candle—as grim and menacing a figure as a man just arisen from the dead.

"That's right!" said Lizzie, unappalled for once. "Come in when everything's over!"

The doctor glanced up and met the detective's eyes, cold and menacing.

"You took my revolver from me, downstairs," he said. "I'll trouble you for it."

The doctor got heavily to his feet. The others, their suspicions confirmed at last, looked at him with startled eyes. The detective seemed to enjoy the universal confusion his words had brought.

Slowly, with sullen reluctance, the doctor yielded up the stolen weapon. The detective examined it casually and replaced it in his hip pocket.

"I've something to settle with you pretty soon," he said through clenched teeth, addressing the doctor. "And I'll settle it properly. Now—what's this?"

He indicated Dale—her face still and waxen—her breath coming so faintly she seemed hardly to breathe at all, as Miss Cornelia and Bailey tried to revive her.

"She's coming to—" said Miss Cornelia, triumphantly, as a first faint flush of color reappeared in the girl's cheeks. "We found her shut in there, Mr. Anderson," the spinster added, pointing toward the gaping entrance of the hidden room.

A gleam crossed the detective's face. He went up to examine the secret chamber. As he did so, Doctor Wells, who had been inching surreptitiously toward the door, sought the opportunity of slipping out unobserved.

But Anderson was not to be caught napping again.

"Wells!" he barked. The doctor stopped and turned.

"Where were you when she was locked in this room?"

The doctor's eyes sought the floor—the walls—wildly—for any possible loophole of escape.

"I didn't shut her in—if that's what you mean!" he said defiantly. "There was some one shut in there with her!" He gestured at the hidden room. "Ask these people here."

Miss Cornelia caught him up at once.

"The fact remains, Doctor," she said, her voice cold with anger, "that we left her here alone. When we came back, you were here. The corridor door was locked, and she was in that room—unconscious!"

She moved forward to throw the light of her candle on the hidden room as the detective passed into it, gave it a swift professional glance, and stepped out again. But she had not finished her story by any means.

"As we opened that door," she continued to the detective, tapping the false mantel, "the doctor deliberately extinguished our only candle!"

"Do you know who was in that room?" queried the detective, fiercely, wheeling on the doctor.

But the latter had evidently made up his mind to cling stubbornly to a policy of complete denial.

"No," he said sullenly. "I didn't put out the candle. It fell. And I didn't lock that door into the hall. I found it locked!"

A sigh of relief from Bailey now centered everyone's attention on himself and Dale. At last the girl was recovering from the shock of her terrible experience and regaining consciousness. Her eyelids fluttered—closed again—opened once more. She tried to sit up, weakly, clinging to Bailey's shoulder. The color returned to her cheeks—the stupor left her eyes. She gave the hidden room a hunted little glance and then shuddered violently.

"Please close that awful door," she said in a tremulous voice. "I don't want to see it again."

The detective went silently to close the iron doors.

"What happened to you? Can't you remember?" faltered Bailey, on his knees at her side.

The shadow of an old terror lay on the girl's face.

"I was in here alone, in the dark," she began slowly—"Then, as I looked at the doorway there, I saw there was somebody there. He came in and closed the door. I didn't know what to do, so I slipped in—there, and after a while I knew he was coming in, too, for he couldn't get out. Then I must have fainted."

"There was nothing about the figure that you recognized?"

"No. Nothing."

"But we know it was the Bat," put in Miss Cornelia.

The detective laughed sardonically. The old duel of opposing theories between the two seemed about to recommence.

"Still harping on the Bat!" he said, with a little sneer.

Miss Cornelia stuck to her guns.

"I have every reason to believe that the Bat is in this house," she said.

The detective gave another jarring, mirthless laugh.

"And that he took the Union bank money out of that safe, I suppose?" he jeered. "No, Miss Van Gorder."

He wheeled on the doctor now.

"Ask the doctor who took the Union bank money out of that safe!" he thundered. "Ask the doctor who attacked me downstairs in the drawing room, knocked me senseless and locked me in the billiard room!"

There was an astounded silence. The detective added a parting shot to his indictment of the doctor.

"The next time you put handcuffs on a man, be sure to take the key out of his vest pocket," he said biting off the words.

Rage and consternation mingled on the doctor's countenance—on the faces of the others astonishment was followed by a growing certainty. Only Miss Cornelia clung stubbornly to her original theory.

"Perhaps I'm an obstinate old woman," she said, in tones which obviously showed that if so she was rather proud of it, "but the doctor and all the rest of us were locked in the living room, not ten minutes ago!"

"By the Bat, I suppose!" mocked Anderson.

"By the Bat!" insisted Miss Cornelia inflexibly. "Who else would have fastened a dead bat to the door downstairs? Who else would have the bravado to do that? Or what you call the imagination?"

In spite of himself Anderson seemed to be impressed.

"The Bat, eh?" he muttered, then, changing his tone, "you knew about this hidden room, Wells?" he shot at the doctor.

"Yes." The doctor bowed his head.

"And you knew the money was in the room?"

"Well, I was wrong, wasn't I?" parried the doctor. "You can look for yourself. That safe is empty."

The detective brushed his evasive answer aside.

"You were up in this room, earlier tonight," he said in tones of apparent certainty.

"No, I couldn't get up!" the doctor still insisted, with strange violence for a man who had already admitted such damning knowledge.

The detective's face was a study in disbelief.

"You know where that money is, Wells, and I'm going to find it!"

This last taunt seemed to goad the doctor beyond endurance.

"Good God!" he shouted recklessly. "Do you suppose if I knew where it is, I'd be here? I've had plenty of chances to get away! No, you can't pin anything on me, Anderson! It isn't criminal to have known that room is here."

"Oh, don't be so d-d virtuous!" said the detective brutally. "Maybe you haven't been upstairs—but, unless I miss my guess, you know who was!"

The doctor's face changed a little.

How Terry Landed a Big Risk

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

SOMETIMES Terry thought she was a good insurance solicitor—and sometimes she thought she wasn't. As she sat patiently in the reception room outside Mr. Bertram Carr's private office that January morning she was quite sure that she was not. She had sat there for an hour and twenty minutes. The day before she had sat there in precisely the same chair for an hour, and on several days before that she had sat there until she knew every angle and crevice of the well-furnished reception room by heart.

She had been told that no one had ever been able to sell Mr. Bertram Carr life insurance—he didn't carry any life insurance, whatever. He was thirty-five and a bachelor.

Terry had been unable to get any interview with him by telephone. She couldn't get him to consent to see her on any pretext she had been able to invent. So now she was simply waiting to see him.

Other days when she had sat there she had simply had to give up before he came out, or else he had come out so quickly and brushed by her so abruptly that she had no opportunity to say a word. Today Terry was determined to get an interview. She had sat there for an hour and a half and had, it seemed to her, worn away almost an entire powder compact and a quarter of a lipstick, just keeping in constant readiness.

Terry was thinking of those things when Mr. Carr's office door was quickly opened and with two long steps he was in the reception room. Terry rushed forward. She knew she was too pretty to be brushed aside.

"I would like to see you—just a moment," she smiled her prettiest and tried to get his eye.

"I am sorry, madam," said Mr. Bertram Carr, looking appealingly toward the reception desk, "but I am rushing to an important engagement. If you'd be so good as to give your name, I think my secretary can see you." And then he was off and Terry was no nearer seeing Bertram Carr than ever.

"Oh, well, there is more than one way to sell insurance," said the more than middle-aged Miss Larson whom Terry encountered in one of the offices of the insurance company for which both worked. "Your line is good looks and prettiness, looking like Fifth Avenue and Cleopatra or something all the time. Now my approach is entirely different. Some day when I get the biggest haul I go around the shabbiest. I could no more hope to get myself up like you than you could hope to place any policies if you didn't."

Surely the drab-looking Miss Larson had not intended to annoy Terry, but Terry was annoyed and felt all the more troubled every time she thought of what the older woman had said. It wouldn't have mattered so much if she had succeeded with Mr. Carr. But she hadn't even got an interview. He hadn't fallen for her good looks one little bit. Perhaps Miss Larson was right; good looks were her line. Without them she could not succeed.

Terry went to bed that night with a fixed determination to show the world in general and Miss Terry in particular that she had more than one string to her line.

Two days later when a rather pale, decidedly shabby and somewhat scared, cold-looking young girl asked the reception clerk whether she might see Mr. Bertram Carr, the clerk could have sworn that she had never seen the girl before. "I don't want to send in my name," said the apparently shy one, "because he might send me to his secretary and she would frighten me to death, but maybe I could sit here and just wait." So the reception clerk let the girl wait.

She was still looking cold and scared not to say actually hungry an hour later when Mr. Carr came out of his room and she stepped timidly toward him.

The reception clerk was amazed when she saw Mr. Carr go back to his office with the shabby-looking young girl. She would have been considerably more surprised if ten minutes later she had heard Mr. Carr, virtually giving his agreement to take out a life insurance of an amazingly large figure.

"I'll take this, of course," said Mr. Carr to the girl, "but there is no particular reason why I should. You see all my kindred are amply provided for, and—I'm not married."

"You may be some day," said the timid little life insurance agent.

After considerable maneuvering Terry contrived to meet Mr. Carr at a house party a month later. It was Terry on a holiday. Terry who had for the time being forgotten all about insurance, but a very pretty and well-dressed Terry nevertheless. It had taken considerable ingenuity to find a friend who also knew Bertram Carr who was in a mood to give a house party.

Bertram knew that he had seen her before but he could identify her neither with the insistent young woman who had tried to see him so often nor the timid girl who had sold him life insurance a little later. Even when he asked Terry to marry him and she had accepted, she had to tell him the story of her campaign that had aroused first his pity—then his love.

California Ranch News

Shipping of navel oranges for the Christmas trade from Redlands was well under way early in the month, with most of the packing houses sending out a few cars. The weather has been almost ideal with warm days and cold nights, which has brought out the color in the fruit and given the oranges a good flavor.

Guy Lowe, potato grower of the Woodville district, started digging a sixty-five acre tract of tubers late in November, which were conspicuous for their fine quality and size. The potatoes were of the White Rose variety. Mr. Lowe estimates his yield at from 175 to 225 sacks to the acre. The potatoes were planted ninety days before harvest. Some of them, put on display in Porterville, weighed from two to four pounds each.

Fumigation of 6,590 acres of citrus groves in Riverside County for citricola and black scale, has been accomplished this year. This includes 565 groves, with 560,206 trees. There were thirteen licensed fumigators in the field, with thirty crews at work. Total cost of the process this season, exceeding that of last on account of the higher price of HCN gas, was $236,478.70. Cost per acre was $35.88, as against $28.30 in 1926.

Approximately $100,000 worth of turkeys will be shipped from Biggs before February 15th, the cargo going mainly to Los Angeles and to San Francisco markets. Eight cars will be shipped by the California Poultry Company of San Francisco, carrying what F. E. Keene, their local manager, estimates to be 200,000 pounds of local turkeys. Prices are running 38 cents and 39 cents per pound to the growers. A. Stokes, one of the largest growers in Biggs, expects to ship 20,000 pounds of turkeys this month.

Payment of approximately $42,000 was distributed last week to growers of sweet potatoes of the Turlock district, covering the last of the November pools. The distribution was made by the Merced-Stanislaus Sweet Potato Growers' Association. With last week's payment the total returned to growers for this season has reached the $220,000 mark. It was announced. Shipment of cellar stock has been under way since the first of this month and will continue throughout the winter, it was announced. Twenty cars of this class of sweet potatoes have gone out in the past fifteen days.

Thousands of head of cattle and sheep from Arizona are being shipped into the San Joaquin Valley to fatten on the abundant wild feed on the west side plains of Fresno, Kern and Kings counties. Last year there was not enough stock to consume the unusually large amount of good pasture. This coming year bids fair to be even better for feed, for there is now good pasture on the west side for both cattle and sheep, and there never has been such a favorable season for lambing, which is now in progress. Joe J. Lemon, one of the largest owners of sheep in this part of the valley, states that in the entire twenty-eight years he has been in the business he never saw such a favorable season.

Results for November, the first month of the ninth annual California Farm Bureau Egg-Laying contest with headquarters at Santa Cruz, indicate that new records of production will be established this year. Some of the best poultry establishments in several states are represented in the competition, including several winners of 1927 out-of-state contests. Arizona, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Michigan and British Columbia flocks are entered. A pen of White Leghorns, owned by the Alberta Ranch of Santa Cruz, won first honors in the 1st class for November, with a production of 181 eggs.

If fair weather continues, virtually all of the rice planted in the Biggs district, Butte County, will be harvested by Christmas, rice authorities claim. The north wind and sunshine have dried up the lands sufficiently that tractors and men are again at work bringing in the rice. Where it has to be trucked for any distance, it is not being cut, as the cost of harvesting is almost as high as would be paid the grower. The rice around Chico is practically all in the warehouse, while about 80 per cent is in around Richvale and Biggs.

The condition of winter vegetables in California during the first half of December is reported as favorable by the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture. A few Southern California districts show the need of rain, but growing conditions in general are good. The harvest of tomatoes for shipment is over in all parts of the state, and the next big deal will be head lettuce in the Imperial Valley. Condition of the lettuce crop is given as 87 per cent of normal, with a production of 3,300,000 crates in prospect.

Steps to create San Francisco as the wool marketing center of eleven Western States for growers, processors and wool merchants were taken last week through the industrial committees of the Chamber of Commerce at San Francisco.

Although it doesn't become effective until January 1, 1928, farmers and all other thrifty folk who have rigged a box on the back of the family car, will be pleased to know that Governor Young has affixed his signature to Senate bill No. 709, which relieves such vehicles of the payment of the commercial weight fee. Bill No. 709 establishes a new schedule of fees for commercial vehicles, and relieves all motor vehicles, irrespective of design, weighing less than 3,000 pounds, of the weight fee.

A new world record for potato production was announced at Stockton last week by State Department of Agricultural and County Horticultural Commission officials. An acre of British Queen potatoes dug on the Frederick H. Rindge delta tract just west of Stockton yielded 64,707 pounds which, it is estimated, would fill 570½ sacks. The former record of 62,293, obtained by digging a field twice, was held by Zuckerman Bros., also Stockton delta farmers. Zuckermans obtained 61,470 pounds with their first digging. Record yields for four varieties of potatoes were produced on the Rindge property this season. All records have been certified by the state and county officials.

Onions form one of the main winter vegetable crops in the Coachella Valley, and a large acreage has been planted this year. One of the large solid plantings is that on the C. H. Hollis Ranch, where sixty acres of onions are now growing. The crop is a little later than usual this year, owing to the fact that late October rains delayed transplanting. The onion sets are grown in seedbeds on a small acreage, where the seeds are planted very thick. When the plants have reached a certain size, they are transplanted by hand to the fields. In addition to the sixty acres on his own ranch, Mr. Hollis has contracted for the output of several other ranches. He operates several packing and shipping sheds in valley cities.

Heavy express shipments of dates, egg plant and string beans left India for Los Angeles and eastern markets during November. Dates have been going out to all parts of the United States, and some foreign countries, since early in September, and will continue moving until the next crop is harvested. The marketing of fresh dates the year 'round from this valley has been made possible by the erection of a new cold storage plant by the Deglet Noor Date Growers' Association. Shipments by express, freight, mail and truck are rapidly increasing each season, and with the large increased acreage coming into bearing each year, this is becoming one of the most important industries in the Coachella Valley.

Estimates place the orange crop of the Hemet Valley for the season just started at 60 per cent of last year's total. Picking started shortly after the first of December, a considerably later date than usual. The oranges promise to be of better quality and of larger size than last season's crop, and on this account the total returns to growers may approximate the receipts from the larger yield of the 1926-27 season. The past season saw shipments of 74,732 packed boxes of oranges from Hemet, this total being carried in 161 cars. The packing house of the Hemet Orange Growers' Association handled 39,732 boxes, while the plant of the Little Lake Mutual Orange distributors cared for 35,000 boxes.

O. W. Baker of Pentz, Cal., is the originator of a seedless lemon. At the Orange and Olive Exposition held at Oroville he exhibited his fruit and explained the development of it. "Several years ago I budded my sweet seedling orange trees with a navel orange and an Eureka lemon. The fruit was navel oranges and lemons. I noticed the lemons were seedless and pruned the tree down to the lemon branches. The fruit has since been of good quality and seedless. Baker, also has in his orchard a seedless orange tree which bears navel, seedless lemons, limes and grapefruit.

The persimmon season at Tustin has closed, with the shutting down of the packing house operated by the Southern Orange County Persimmon Growers' Association. About 150 tons of fruit were packed this season, under the standard specifications of the new marketing association. The first straight carload of persimmons ever shipped from Southern California originated at the Tustin house this fall. Since then several carloads have been shipped to various eastern points.

The cotton estimate for Madera County is around 5,200 bales, valued at $520,000. About 2,600 tons of cotton-seed have been produced, valued at $78,000. The cotton crop in itself, and a wonderful grade of cotton is raised in Madera County, is thus valued at $598,000. A prominent grain merchant in Madera estimates that about 50,000 sacks of barley and 212,000 sacks of wheat were raised in the county during the 1927 season. The value of the barley crop would be about $962,500 and that of the wheat about $600,000.

The DAIRY

MUST FEED COWS FOR PRODUCTION

If the dairy industry of North Carolina is to profit most from the introduction of pure-bred cows and bulls brought in by farmers in recent years, the offspring from these animals must be well fed.

"In the three dairy improvement campaigns conducted in this state during the last three years about 850 pure bred, well selected dairy bulls have been placed on that many farms," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "This does not include a number of other fine animals brought in through private sales. If the dairy industry is to derive any great benefit from the use of the animals, their offsprings must be well fed. This is true from the time the calf is dropped until it has passed its usefulness as a milk cow. Many heifers sired by good bulls have been disappointed and have been stunted in growth and production by under-feeding when they were young."

Mr. Arey states that good breeding is very important in building up the milk and cream production of a herd, but it is ineffective unless the good breeding is accompanied by good feeding. Underfeeding, he states, is largely responsible for dairy cows of this state averaging only about 150 pounds of butterfat a year. This quantity of butterfat selling for 45 cents a pound brings only $67.50 which will not pay for the feed the cow eats. In many cases, the production may be increased from 150 pounds to 225 pounds by liberal feeding. At 45 cents a pound the 225 pounds of fat will bring $101.25 which is enough to give the farmer a good profit for all the feeds he produces on his farm and feeds to his cows.

These animals which will not produce as high as 225 pounds of fat when well fed, should be culled from the herd and sold to the butcher; but, no cow should be so condemned until she has had a chance under good feeding and care, states Mr. Arey.

Winter Water Supply Is Important for the Cows

Dairy cows which are giving from 25 to 30 pounds of milk daily will need from nine to ten gallons of water daily, while cows that are giving only a small amount of milk can get along on half of this amount. This fact alone demonstrates that a good water supply is a prerequisite of successful dairying.

When dairy cows are forced to go out into a cold northwest wind and shiver while they are trying to drink out of a trough partially covered with ice, it stands to reason that they will not drink a sufficient amount to produce efficiently. From a standpoint of feed alone, it is cheaper to heat the water with coal or oil than it is to heat it in the cow's body by the use of high-priced feed.

If the question of economy alone were the only point to consider, it would not be so important. However, cows will not produce to their maximum capacity when they are forced to drink ice water. When such conditions exist, it is only natural that cows will drink only sufficient to keep up their body requirements.

Electricity Is Needed to Operate Water Motor

It is easy to install a water system that will give a supply of water at all times under pressure. The old-fashioned elevated tank in the attic or outside on a tower will work, but the latest development is a little compact, self-contained automatic pump that costs less than $75. It consists of an automatic electric pump, a little pneumatic tank and the necessary pipe connections. Set it at the pressure desired—when the pressure drops the pump starts working and keeps on until the pressure is up again. The tank helps to maintain a steady pressure, which means a uniform flow. Of course electricity is necessary to operate the motor, but this is rapidly being made available almost everywhere.

Cream Separator

A cream separator properly installed, lubricated and operated under normal conditions from day to day should not have a wide variation in tests, but there are so many factors, such as temperature, speed of the machine, etc., that affect the tests that it is well to give all of these factors consideration before becoming suspicious of your cream buyer. When the cream screw is turned toward the center it will deliver a much richer cream.

Modern Dairy Methods

The saving of time and labor which is possible with modern dairy-barn construction may easily make the difference between profit and loss. Handled by old methods, the management of a dairy herd was a hard grind which took all the strength a man had, and gave a basis for the assertion that dairying was a dog's life. The newer methods and modern equipment make it possible to handle the job with much less labor and yet do it better.

Governor Dern of Utah, in a witty after-dinner speech in Salt Lake City, praised cosmetics.

"After all," he said, "cosmetics make life pleasanter. Let me tell you a story."

"The minister's wife, at Croydon Four Corners, spent last winter with her niece and nephew in New York, and on her return home she was made up a little."

"The minister was at work on a sermon in his study when she got back. He looked up at her from his manuscript with a smile of welcome, but the next moment his smile changed to a frown."

"Woman," he thundered, 'go wash your face."

"The poor lady obeyed meekly, and then she returned to the study. Again the minister looked up from his manuscript."

Old Colonial Houses Built for Permanence

Back in the early days of America, when the family's interests of necessity were almost entirely centered about the home, the permanence of the materials in its construction was the paramount consideration, and out of this honest use of good materials came the early Colonial architectural designs which are today the subject of deep study by architects because of their fidelity to classic grace, combined with a certain freedom of interpretation.

One splendid example of this dignified spirit of home building is that of Upsala house, Germantown, Pa. The home, erected in 1798, has been in the continuous possession of the family since its building and stands today in as sound condition as when it was first constructed.

The builders of Upsala house spared no pains to make it of permanent construction. Its stone walls are protected by copper gutters and rain-pipes.

Weaving Pioneer Honored

In honor of Alexander Morton, first to recognize that hand-loom weaving must give way to the power loom, and inventor of chenille fabric and the madras material, a memorial is being erected on the Kilmarnock main road between Deavel and Newlin, Scotland. Morton died in 1923, and in the valley near the memorial are 20 factories, most of which are supervised by men who were once his foremen. The memorial contains a bronze portrait bust of Morton, and two stone figures, which will occupy pedestals at the extreme ends. These figures, a "boy with a sickle" and a "girl with a shuttle," symbolize agriculture and weaving. Panels in the wall depict the old and new weaving machines.

Sugar From Dahlia

At last botany has found an esthetic source of sweetness. Sugar-cane is unconvincing in appearance, the sugar-beet unbelievably odious in its coarse white dress, but now the dahlia, so long grown in our gardens for its handsome flowers, comes as a rival to these sordid sources of saccharine. The tubers, which are found to yield a sugar one and a half times as sweet as beetroot sugar, are more easily grown than beet. The cost of production is about the same, but the great advantage of dahlia sugar is that, unlike beet, it can be taken by people suffering from diabetes.

Priceless Old Coins

Three two thousand-year-old Roman coins, worth nothing at face value but priceless as relics, have been presented to the Toledo Museum of Art by Thomas Winezop. The coins were found by Winezop, hidden in a crucifix brought to this country from his mother's home in Switzerland seven years ago. Winezop said the crucifix in which the relics were found had been in his mother's possession about 60 years. He did not know the history of the image before those years.

An appeal has been made to Yale alumni for aid in obtaining a tenant for Plasyn-Yale, or Yale hall, in Yale valley, near Wrexham, Wales. Yale hall belonged to the family of Elihu Yale, founder of Yale university. The present tenant, a disabled war veteran, suggests that Yale men might use the estate as a vacation camp.

Kept Clock Moving

When a broken pin caused the faithful clock in St. Paul's cathedral, London, to stop men acted as the works.

Recognizing the fact that thousands depended on the clock for time, officials of the church placed behind the face of the timekeeper men who turned the hands every minute during the day-time and until repairs were completed.

the New Year, a very representative through the columns of the Register.

We all hope that the year of 1928 will be a happy and prosperous one for this section. How can we make it so? We suggest that buying at home whenever possible is a very potential factor in community growth and progress. The dollar you spend at home is the dollar that you have a chance of getting back.While you may occasionally find very alluring displays of merchandise elsewhere, in most cases, the home merchant can supply your needs very satisfactorily and as his patronage increases, he will have a better store and indirectly your business and property also becomes more valuable.Buying at home whenever it is possible is one way, in which we can all contribute to the happiness and prosperity of Washington township in 1928.According to reports from Liver-more, Jackson Dennis, is organizing a company to start oil drilling there soon. Dennis, who now lives at Berkeley, is well known in this section.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Completion of the inspection and licensing of 352 maternity hospitals and homes in California having a total of 2,391 beds, was announced last week by the State Department of Public Health. Licenses were granted to 213 hospitals and 139 maternity homes.

Will Rogers, humorist and erstwhile mayor of Beverly Hills, was last week urged to give up his cowboy togs and seek the toga of a United States Senator. State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson announced that "in all seriousness" he is not only advocating Rogers as Senator from California, but has sent the comedian a telegram proposing that he stand for office at the 1928 election against Senator Hiram Johnson.

The State Highway Commission now is making replacements of trees along the 685 of state highways now tree-lined. The trees include black walnut, European sycamore, Arizona ash, black locust. Counties in which highway replacements are to be made include, among others, Sacramento, Yolo, Colusa, Glenn, Butte, Tehama, Sonoma, Solano, Napa, San Joaquin, Placer, Humboldt and Lake counties.

To combat infantile paralysis or other children's diseases, a perpetual gift, amounting to $5,000 a year, has been made to the University of California, according to announcement from President W. W. Campbell. The anonymous donor, "A Friend of the University," stipulated that the fund be controlled by the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research, "primarily for the study, prevention and cure of infantile paralysis in California." He requested that the money should not be diverted to other purposes unless "some other serious epidemic threatens the lives of the children of this state."

California's total estimated daily average crude oil production fell off 3,300 barrels during the week ended December 17, figures released last week by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated daily production for the entire state for the week of the report was 624,100 barrels, compared with 627,400 barrels for the week ended December 10. Greater fluctuations in the major producing fields was a drop of 3,000 barrels at Seal Beach, where production was 43,000 barrels, compared with 46,000 barrels the previous week. Ventura avenue increased to 53,600 barrels from 51,900 barrels.

Kern county has a total of 23,975 minors under 18 years of age, according to county-wide census just completed and now filed with the state by County Superintendent of Schools L. E. Chenoweth. In addition there are 1,520 children whose residence is migratory and whose parents are engaged primarily in cotton-harvesting at this time.

There are approximately 100 lepers now in California, it was estimated last week by Dr. Walter M. Dickie, state director of public health, passing this report to Governor Young on data gathered by health authorities in past investigations. Dr. Dickie said 71 lepers have been sent from California to the Federal leprosarium at Carrville, La., since 1922. Many unfortunate sufferers from the disease however, remain in hiding, he said.

Another case of tularemia—the second to come to his attention within a month—has been reported to the city health department at Sacramento by Dr. Samuel J. Wells. The second victim contracting it, as did the first, by contact with rabbits he killed while hunting. Tularemia is a plague-like disease with symptoms similar to typhoid. The cases reported in Sacramento are believed to have been the first ever reported in California. The disease is most common among rodents and rabbits. In a bulletin issued recently, the state board of health says the disease is not easily spread from person to person and that there is no danger that it may ever become epidemic.

The State Highway Commission, meeting January 12, will allocate approximately $9,000,000 in gasoline tax revenues to be available for new state highway construction during the present biennium, and will work out a definite budget covering proposed expenditures for the two-year period which ends June 30, 1929. Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, announced last week that the allocation will designate sums intended for use on San Francisco's Bay Shore highway, the Skyline boulevard and the other state primary and secondary projects. Under the 1927 Breed bill, increasing the gasoline tax to finance new construction, 75 per cent of the revenues will go for primary routes and 25 per cent for secondary routes.

California will eventually have a population of 50,000,000, Capt. Robert Dollar, steamship magnate, predicted last week in the course of discussing the meeting next February 8 and 9 at Honolulu of the Western division of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Captain Dollar said: The commercial development on the Pacific Coast will in time demand a population of 50,000,000 people in the State of California. Here, in the western empire, we will find the commercial and population center of the world.

State regulation of the barber business and strict enforcement of sanitary measures in all shops will not result in increased prices for shaves and haircuts, C. E. Ryneason, secretary of the new State Board of Barber Examiners, made this prediction last week in connection with the issuance of state rules and regulations to approximately 7,000 barber shops where they will be displayed for the guidance of tonsorial artists and the information of the public. Ryneason said the board has just completed the mailing out of licenses to 17,000 barbers, including 400 apprentices.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California last week introduced a bill in Congress which would pave the way for allowing the expenditure of funds appropriated for the care of Indians in California through the state agencies. Legislation was enacted at the last session of the California Legislature which would allow the state to expend this money for the care of the needy Indians, providing the proper steps are taken in this direction by the Federal Government. Under the Johnson bill, the federal moneys appropriated for the care and relief of the Indians in California would be paid under the direction of the state.

California was the fifth largest exporter in order of value among the states during the second quarter of 1927, with exports of merchandise valued at $74,846,100, compared with $66,734,615 for the corresponding period of 1926, an increase of $8,111,493, according to figures made public last week by the department of commerce at Washington. Gasoline valued at $16,627,825 ranked first in order of value among California's exports during the three-month period. Gas and fuel oil exports were valued at $8,304,403. Other commodities ranking high in value were kerosene, $6,110,479; oranges, $4,378,317; unmanufactured cotton, $3,621,415; barley, $1,994,218; dried raisins, $1,826,243; boards planks and scantlings, $1,715,861; crude petroleum, $1,557,135; rice, $1,685,901; canned peaches, $1,260,398; canned sardines, $1,192,040, and dried prunes $1,167,932.

Showing a steady substantial growth, unsurpassed, it is claimed by any other interior California city, the assessment valuation and population of Bakersfield have more than doubled during the last decade. From $15,030,471 in 1918 the assessed valuation of this city has jumped to $31,819,205 for 1927, and the population increase has kept pace, rising from approximately 15,500 to 31,012 during the same period. Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for January 1

JOHN THE BAPTIST AND JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—He must increase, but I must decrease.
PRIMARY TOPIC—John Tells About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—John Welcomes and Baptizes Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPICS—John Prepares the Way for Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—John Heralds the Mighty One.

In order to understand the lessons for the first six months of the year it is necessary to grasp the central purpose of the Gospel according to Mark. In the Old Testament is set forth an august portrait of Jesus Christ. He is the Branch, the King (Jer. 23:5); the Branch, the Servant (Zech. 3:8); the Branch, the Man (Zech. 6:12); the Branch of the Lord (Isa. 4:2).

The fourfold account in the New Testament called the Gospels, placed alongside of the Old Testament predictions, fits exactly. Matthew presents Him as the King; Mark, the Servant of the Lord; Luke as the Kinsman Redeemer and John as the Son of God. The theme of Mark is the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God (ch. 1:1). The word gospel means "good news." Jesus means "Savior." Christ means "Anointed." It is good news therefore because it is the good tidings that God has anointed Jesus Christ to be the Savior of the world. The key verse is Mark 10:45, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." The key words are, "straightway," "forthwith," "immediately."

I. Who is Jesus Christ (1:1)?
He is none other than God's Beloved Son.

II. The Forerunner of Jesus Christ (vv. 2-8).

1. Who he was (vv. 2,3).

He was John, the Baptist, who was prophesied of more than five hundred years before (Isa. 40:3).

His mission was to prepare the way for Christ's coming. He represented himself as but a voice of one crying in the wilderness. He was therefore God's voice sounding forth the divine will and purpose. He was content to be but a voice.

2. John's message (vv. 3-8).

(1). Prepare ye the way of the Lord (v. 3).

It was customary for servants to go before distinguished personages and prepare the road over which they were to travel. In this preparation there was to be removal of stones, the leveling of the surface, etc. John's message meant therefore that the people should remove from their hearts everything which hindered the incoming of the Lord.

(2) The baptism of repentance (v. 4).

In preparation for the coming Christ the people were to repent of their sins. Those who repented were to be baptized. Baptism was to be administered to those who repented as an expression of penitence which led to forgiveness of sins.

(3) The coming of the Messiah (vv. 7, 8).

The coming one was to be much greater than himself; so great that John was unworthy to loose the latch of His shoes. The superior dignity of Christ was not only in His person but in the work He was to perform.

3. His success (v. 5).

People from all over Judea and Jerusalem went out and were baptized. His food and dress indicated that he had withdrawn from the world as a protest against its follies and sins.

III. The Baptism of Jesus Christ (vv. 9-11).

Jesus was not baptized because He had sinned and therefore needed repentance, but because He was now about to accomplish a work which would constitute the basis of all righteousness. He was now dedicating Himself to the task of bringing in righteousness through His sacrificial death.

(1) The opened heavens. This indicated His connection with heaven.

(2) The descent of the Spirit upon Him. This gave the divine seal to His work.

(3) The voice of approval from heaven. This made clear to John the fact that Jesus was the Messiah.

IV. Jesus Christ Tempted by Satan (vv. 12,13).

This took place immediately after the heavenly recognition. This testing was to demonstrate the reality of the incarnation. Because of this demonstration believers can be assured that the Son of God has become incorporated with humanity for the purpose of its salvation.

From Beginning to End

But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven; a land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.—Deut. 11:1-12.

Putting an Art Education to Work

Negligee Styles Are Ultra-Modern

Lines of Fashionable Gowns Show Break From Sports Idea of Design.

Sports styles in dress have for several seasons rather obscured the softly flattering tea gown in favor of a more practical style of negligee. Now, however, the return toward feminine design and treatment is bringing out many new and interesting creations in the more intimate style of costume. Some of the best French and American designers, observes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, have turned their attention to it with enthusiasm, finding in it opportunity for original ways of using the new fabrics and trimmings.

An ultra-modern note runs through the latest negligees and is conspicuous because of the patterns seen in the fabrics, which are still regarded as radical departures in the art of design. Batik is having a distinct revival in the gowns of silk and crepe, sometimes appearing in softly-toned tints and other times in daring contrasts and bold figures. The great advance made in designs for using this kind of printed materials is to be seen in some handsome models. They are made mostly in a style that is described as "tailored" because of the shape given the coat. This invariably has at some point a subtle twist of line or suggestion of drapery, the very marked pattern of batik and the cubist stuffs necessitating severe treatment and simple lines.

The colors are especially beautiful this season. Many of them suggest the fabrics of the Orient in their rich tones of red, purple, blue and yellow. Because yellow is so fashionable in all types of dress, it is shown in the negligees in every shade from pale gold to deep orange. A few amusing examples of this ultra-modern idea in house gowns are shown in Molly-O crepe, printed in jazz-like patterns and fantastic combinations of color. Some are extreme, but chic, and are exceedingly popular among the modernists.

Velvets Also Printed.

The new supple velvets also are printed in this up-to-the-minute style. They are used for some of the gowns designed for studio teas, which are made usually in a gay coat-frock or pajama design. Intended to be worn by the younger women. The negligees that most women prefer to wear in their own chambers are the always flattering gowns of soft satin, crepe, chiffon or velvet, with trimmings of ostrich, marabou, lace or fur. These have been changed only in material, color and trimmings, because the design has been found to be so "kind" to the face and figure. The latest collections show models of unusual charm.

One made for a New York bride is a luxurious, wrap-around, ankle-length robe of pale yellow crepe satin. It was lined with chiffon velvet of a deeper shade. Yellow ostrich bordered the edge of the gown, ran around the neck and crossed surplice fashion to one side, where a large choux of ostrich held the slight drape. A band of the same feather trimming is used to finish the edge of wide sleeves. A robe of this description is practical, and becoming in any color, and looks well with marabou, lace or plaited chiffon trimmings. It is a slip-on type, but "dressed" enough to be worn at breakfast or about one's own apartments in the morning.

Because the same model, translated in terms of the luxurious new "orchid" chiffon velvet or of metal brocade, may be worn for a greater number of occasions, some of the Parisian modistes have used it in making robes suitable for afternoons at home. These, more nearly than any other designs, represent a modern version of the once fashionable "tea gown." That was a costume of elegance and much elaboration which was worn by the hostess for high tea and was the costume in which most liberties in material, color and general style was taken. Individuality was regarded as being properly reflected in the formal "tea gown," although those earlier flights of fancy would be regarded as but gentle flutters today. The modern variant, as presented by the best artists, has undeniable charm and distinction, and no less dignity than the old.

Metal Brocades Popular.

Metal brocades are at the peak of the mode for the new tea gowns. One that is made on formal and graceful lines has the authority of Molyneux, who is recognized as a stickler for the conservative. The material is a superb brocade in subtly blended shades of blue, violet and rose combined with silver—a luminous, supple stuff that is well suited to draped lines.

Some tea gowns designed by Redfern are reminiscent of the former day costumes beloved by the English, though they are in the manner now in vogue. They use the most splendid brocades in both velvet and metal, as well as much fine lace and often a touch of fur. One negligee, tea gown or whatever the occasion makes of it, is built of mauve velvet in a closely drawn princess model, long at the back, and with the neck cut in a deep oval in front. Redfern has added a fichu of old ivory lace, which has its ends caught softly over the bust, and wide cuffs, which decorate the long, slightly mousquetaire sleeves. The gown is undraped, but opens at one side, when it discloses a drop skirt of lace and velvet faced with pale gold tissue. Another formal robe shown by this house is made of velvet faced with silver lame.

The very reverse of the usual type in tea gowns is seen in a model by Jenny, which is made of all-over lace and lined with pale, rose chiffon. This is particularly appealing because the gown is cut precisely like the coat-frock of a few seasons ago.

Accessories Are Gay.

Interesting and varied accessories that belong with the negligee are being brought out. They are dainty things and often include revivals of old fashions. One is the round garter, which is especially useful for wear with the corsetless lounging robe. Time was when garter buckles were as ornamental and as expensive as other items of jewelry. Some on this order are now being shown by fashionable jewelers, and they are found in other styles in the lingerie shops.

Ribbons, tinsel frills, rosettes of chiffon and artificial flowers are used as trimmings, as well as ostrich feathers, marabou and bits of fine fur which are used sometimes contrived with brilliants, colored stones or fine enamel or metal. It is considered chic to have the garters and their trimming match the negligee in color. The favored shades are yellow, which is seen with topaz buckles; violet, with a touch of lavender ostrich and an ornament set with amethyst; pale blue, with silver gauze ribbon bows, and turquoise and pale pink.

The current preference for ensemble effects governs all the details of the boudoir robe from the lingerie to the slipper toe. There are many picturesque style in mules, some of which are more practical than the regulation form. They are being made of fine chiffon velvet and usually have no trimming of any sort. Those in metal brocade are in beautiful pastel shades combined with silver thread. Others, in silver and gilt leathers, are in delicate ombre tints. An innovation is a sandal made somewhat like a Chinese shoe of lacquer, with straps in place of a vamp. These in green and gold, black and scarlet and other contrasts of color are very decorative. Choux of chiffon and of ostrich are still shown in satin mules.

It is now usual to have stockings matching the gown—especially the negligee—and these are to be had in all of the fashionable colors. Some of the novelties hailing from Paris are painted and embroidered, though the preference of most American women is for a plain or openwork style. Black is being worn a great deal, both in stockings of plain chiffon and in those with fancy clocks and insets.

TEA TIME

This is the season of the year when a cup of tea is enjoyed with one's friends with a bite of sandwich or a bit of cake.

Filled Cookies.—Take two cupfuls of sugar, one and one-eighth cupfuls of shortening, one quart of flour, one cupful of buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda, two eggs well beaten. Mix well and roll out; place the following filling on one and cover with another. Bake in a quick oven:

Filling.—Take one-half cupful each of minced raisins and dates and one glass of currant jelly. Mix and cook until well blended. Cool before using.

Sunshine Cookies.—Take one cupful of sugar, one-third cupful of butter, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, mixed with three cupfuls of flour. Add one beaten egg and the flour with one-half cupful of milk alternately to the sugar and butter mixture. Add salt if lard is used for shortening. Roll out and use the following for the filling:

Filling.—Take one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of hot water, one tablespoonful flour and the juice and rind of half a lemon. Cook until smooth, adding a tablespoonful of butter just as it is taken off. Cool before using.

Hickory Nut Cakes.—To one beaten egg add one cupful of sugar, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of cream—sweet or sour—two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder if the cream is sweet, one-half teaspoonful of soda and a teaspoonful of baking powder if sour. Add one cupful of broken hickory nut meats and bake in gem pans.

Jumbles.—Mix and beat well one cupful of molasses and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Add one cupful each of brown sugar and shortening well mixed, one teaspoonful of salt, three beaten eggs, one-half tablespoonful of ginger, one-half tablespoonful of cinnamon and four scant cupfuls of flour. Drop on a buttered baking sheet and bake in moderate oven.

Oatmeal Wafers.—Take two cupfuls of rolled oats which have been ground through the meat grinder and lightly browned in the oven; add one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of lard or butter, a teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one-half cupful of hot water. Mix and roll very thin. Brown in a hot oven.

The Nutritious Cheese

As cheese is one of our most concentrated foods, rich in food value and with no waste, it should be more commonly used as a food rather than a relish. There are those who call it indigestible, which it may be, as may any food under certain conditions. Cheese eaten after a hearty meal and improperly masticated is indigestible and has, because of that, been called guilty.

Cheese Balls.—Mix one and one-half cupfuls of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of flour, a dash of salt and cayenne. Add the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Shape into small balls and roll in crumbs, fry in deep fat, draining on paper to remove excess of fat. Serve with endive salad.

Cheese Croquettes.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add one cupful of flour gradually, stir until creamy, then add two-thirds of a cupful of milk, two egg yolks and beat well. Add one-half cupful of grated Gruyere cheese and beat until melted. Season with salt, cayenne and a cupful of diced American cheese. Spread on a shallow platter to cool. Cut into any desired shape, dip into fine bread crumbs, then into egg and again into crumbs. Fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper.

Cheese Fritters.—Slice thin half a dozen sour apples. The apples should be mellow and easily cooked. Have ready half as many thin slices of rich cheese. Beat two eggs and season to taste with salt and pepper with a little mustard. Soak the cheese slices in the egg mixture and put each slice between two slices of apple. Dip into beaten egg and saute in hot butter. Serve with a green salad.

Mince Sandwiches.—Cut fine a cupful of chicken, turkey or veal, one cupful of chopped nuts, one box of sardines and four cucumber pickles finely chopped. Mix with salad dressing. Butter slices of bread, lay on a lettuce leaf and spread with the mixture.

Nut and Fig Sandwiches.—Wash and chop fine one-half pound of figs, cook in just enough water to moisten, cool and spread a buttered slice with the fig mixture and the other buttered slice with chopped nuts. Put together and cut into any desired shape.

Patterns in old cloth and lineum make fine models for patchwork for those who enjoy that kind of work.
